

SMOKING GANJA THROUGH FRIEND'S HAND

If one has got their own philosophy,
then let them preach their own philosophy.

But do not do it in the name the of the Gita. This is our protest to all the interpreters of the Bhagavad-gita.

If they do not believe in God, Krsna,
and they don't want to surrender to Him, then
let them preach atheism.

Everyone has got the right to do this,
but why through the Gita?

This is like the man who wants to smoke ganja, but he does not want to be caught. So he goes to his friend for smoking ganja.

A cartoon illustration. On the left, a monk with a shaved head and a yellow shawl stands with his hands clasped. On the right, two men in green clothing are sitting on the ground. One man is holding a pipe to his mouth, and the other is holding the pipe for him. A speech bubble from the monk contains text. The background shows a tree and a blue sky.

While his friend
is smoking ganja,
he grasps his hands
and smokes ganja
through his friend's hand.

When the authorities come

Oh! I have not smoked ganja. See, my hands are clean

MORAL :

The idea is that if one wants to preach the Gita, then he must preach it as it is, otherwise don't go through the Gita.
