He received many applications from the candidates...

He discusses with his secretary.

From the job applications I have received, only two candidates' profiles look good to me. Can you please call them for an interview?

Yes Sir.

The manager was quite good in His observations.

The first candidate entered.

This person
when he entered the room left the door
open.

Formal talks were there for 15 mins.

Can you wait outside, we might get back to you!

Then the employer called the second candidate and he observed him also.

Second candidate entered.

This person
when he entered
shut the door behind him Hmm!

The employer asked the second candidate some formal questions and asked him to wait outside.

That first man I spoke to has all the qualifications, but I have decided to give the job to the second man.

But,
why sir?

It appears that the first person is a lazy fellow as he left the door open while the other did shut the door...

So while he
may not be so qualified,
he will learn quickly.

MORAL:

Even though one may be so - called qualified, if he is not trained in simple etiquette's like closing doors,
what is the use of his learning?
