

The Boy

Who Didn't Answer

His Exam

Once a boy went to school to appear in his exam.

When he came back from the exam, his father asked him...

My dear son,
how have you answered
your question paper?

Yes, it went well.

Hmm... tell me more about it, son.

Some questions
looked difficult to me,
so I couldn't answer them.

And the easier questions, well what is there to write? I know everything.

MORAL:

Those who don't want to evolve can justify their ignorance the way they like. Similarly, people customize religion for their convenience, instead of transforming themselves to meet the Truth.