

The Sweet Seller

Gopal loved children very much.
Even the children treated him
as their friend.

One day, the children demanded a proof for Gopal's friendship....

Today you have to give a test to prove our friendship.

Yes...

Will you get us some free sweets from Bhola's sweet shop?

Bhola is a big cheater. He cheats us even when we pay for the sweets.

Is that so?
Then be ready for a big sweet feast.

It was time for Bhola's afternoon nap...

I'm going in for a short nap. Wake me up if anyone comes for sweets.

Yes, father.

And, you
do not try to eat any sweets.

Once Bhola was fast asleep, Gopal entered into the shop...

Without saying anything Gopal starts eating sweets...

Who are you?
What are you doing?
Stop eating sweets.

Don't worry.
I'm your father's friend.
You can tell him about me.

What is your name?

Just tell your father, Makhi (fly) is eating sweets.

Father,
wake up quickly
Makhi is eating sweets.

Uh? What? Makhi?
Just shut your mouth. So what if Makhi (fly) is eating the sweets?
Makhi likes sweets. Do not disturb me. Let me sleep.

Makhi is eating sweets, father...

Just use your head! How much can this makhi eat? And do not disturb me again..

I told you,
your father knows
me. He would not mind...

...Saying this Gopal left with the sweets.

Well, Children, here you are! Don't forget to thank Bhola when you next pass his shop. Also, give him Makhi's regards.

MORAL:

According to the karma cycle - What goes around, comes around. So, we must never cheat anyone because if we do, some day or the other we will have to face the bad consequences. Here, Bhola cheated all the boys and hence, he was also cheated one day.