

King and the crow

Long ago there lived king crow & queen crow.

Once they were flying over the king's palace and they saw that the king's cook was cooking malpua for him ...

My dear husband, today
I don't want to go in search of worms.
I want to eat the same food cooked for the King.

My dear queen,
this is not possible.
As soon as we go there
they will kill us...

I will eat only that food... I don't want anything...

The king crow tried to convince the queen crow but in vain.

Finally, the king crow called his minister and said...

My wife insists that she wants to eat the food cooked in the king's palace. You know how dangerous it is. What do I do?

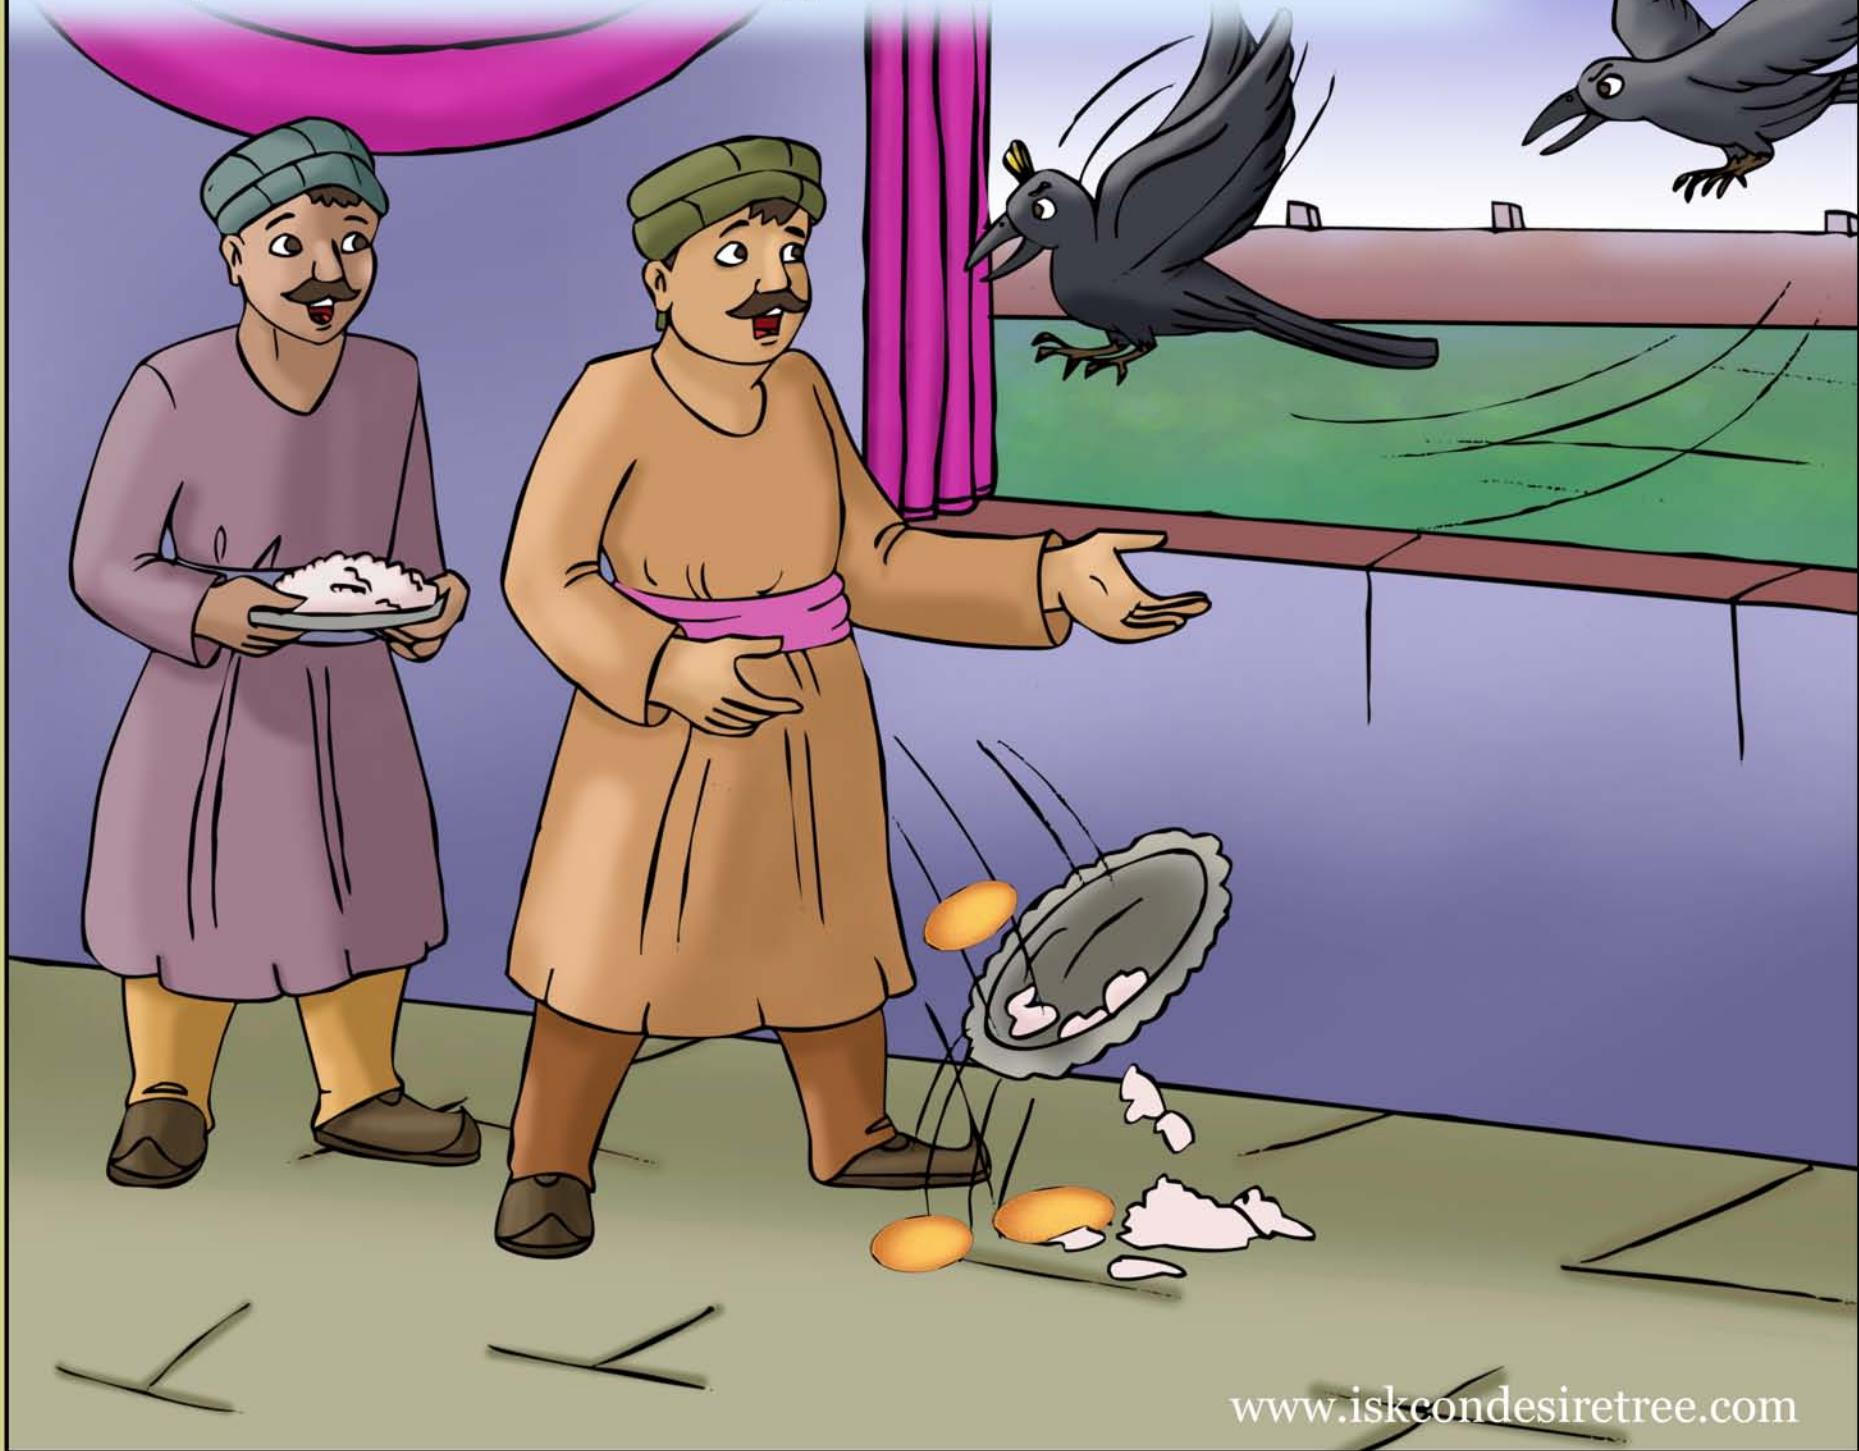

Don't worry my dear king, I will make a plan to get what the queen crow want's to eat..

The minister made a plan of attack & took other crows with himself to the palace.

When the cook was taking the cooked food for the king, the crows suddenly attacked and the cook dropped the plate...

Taking advantage of the situation the crows took some malpua and rice for the queen crow...

I am hungry and these crows have destroyed
my food. Go and catch them.

The cook immediately ran and caught one of the crows.

How dare you stole my food. You will have to die for this!

My dear king
I was just trying to serve my king & queen. I am quite successful & hence now I don't fear for death.

I am very pleased
by your sincerity and service to your king. From today onwards we will provide food for your crow king and queen ...

Moral: Faithful service attracts mercy