Once there was an old man and a young boy who were travelling with a donkey. The young boy was leading the donkey and the old man was riding on the donkey.

When they passed through a small village,
some of the town people yelled abuse..

Look at this old man taking advantage of this poor young boy! What a rascal !

After they had passed through the village

We had better swap over, otherwise they will abuse us in the next village

So then they swapped with the old man leading and the young boy riding.

But in the next village also they got criticized

Look at this selfish boy, taking advantage of his grandfather. He should let the old man ride on the donkey

So then they both got off and led the donkey.
But in the next village the people yelled out..

Look at these two stupid people! They have a donkey, but
they are choosing
to walk instead !

Then the old man concluded...

Actually, it doesn't matter what you do, people will always be critical.

MORAL:

It is the nature of people to criticize.
But we should try to avoid doing that as far as possible. It is said that if you point one finger on others your own three fingers are pointed at you. It is better to see our own faults then seeing the faults of other people..
